RESEARCH IN PROGRESS

- 2020 Atlas of Dayton: A City in Progress (2016–ongoing) lives as a traveling exhibition containing a collection of maps that visually connect the landscape to the inequities of resource access and opportunities that pervade Dayton, Ohio. The maps reveal areas negatively impacted through appreciation and love for community. The next collection of maps will visualize the 2020 census, highlighting differences in income, education and food access in Montgomery County. The current exhibit asks the public to share their stories around food access. These invitations will be extended as the Atlas grows to include further community members’ lived experiences. These shared narratives will offer an additional layer of meaning that encourages continued community collaboration. The research has led to partnerships with Dayton Metro Library, Miami Valley Regional Planning Commission and Sinclair Community College.
